William Ellsworth "Dummy" Hoy

A remarkable life and career

In 1886, age 24, Hoy began his professional career in Oshkosh, Wisconsin. During his stint in Oshkosh, he arranged for the third-base coach to signal strikes and balls to him.

After two seasons, he was grabbed by the Washington Senators, his first major-league team. By the end of his rookie year with Washington, Hoy led the National League in stolen bases-- an astounding 82. For the Senators, he set a fielding record that still stands. On June 19, 1889, he threw out three Indianapolis base-runners at home plate from the outfield -- the first of only three outfielders to do so.

In 1890, Hoy, together with his Senatorial teammates (Including Connie Mack), jumped to the buffalo, Brotherhood team of the short-lived Players' League. The club and league folded after as single season. Charlie Comiskey brought Hoy to the American Association's St. Louis Browns in 1891 -- the best team Hoy had played for so far. Hoy led the league in walks with 119 and led the Browns with 136 runs scored. But the American Association folded after the 1891 season, so Hoy returned to Washington and put in two more seasons with the unlucky Senators.

After the regular 1893 season was over, Hoy joined the Boston Beaneaters' winter-league team in California, a barnstorming aggregation casually called the Boston Baseball Club. His last play for the season -- a stunningly calculated 9th-inning catch in a thick gray San Francisco fog -- clinched the 1894 pennant for his team. In 1894, he was sold to the Cincinnati Reds, then under Comiskey's management. There he played center field again as an outstanding flyhawk. The Cincinnati fans adored him. He was with the Reds four seasons, his longest stay with any team, and liked Cincinnati so much that he settled there during the off-season.

In 1898, he was traded to the hapless Louisville Colonels shortly before the club was dropped from the National league, joined a minor league, and disbanded,. (Fred Clarke was player-manger, and Hoy's teammates also included Honus Wagner, Tommy Leach, Rube Waddell, Nick Altrock, and other notables, several of whom formed the nucleus of the new Pittsburgh Pirates' aggregation after they left the Colonels) He gave Louisville two of his finest seasons, batting .318 in 1898 (His best average in the majors) and .306 in 1899.

On May 1, 1901, Hoy hit the second grand slam in the newly-formed American League. (His teammate Herm McFarland had hit the first one earlier in the same game.) That year, he played in 130 games and hit .294 for Comiskey's Chicago White Sox (under Clarke Griffith's management), and helped win the first AL pennant for them. He had 45 assists from the field -- a record for any league.

He returned to the Reds for what was to be his last major-league season. On May 16, 1902, "Dummy" Hoy, going to bat for the Reds, faced Luther Haden "Dummy" Taylor (1875- 1958) of the New York Giants. (The Giants won that game 5 to 3 with 5 runs in the 9th inning.) It was the only time in major-league history that two deaf-players faced each other. Hoy and Taylor, a colorful, peppery character, later played as battery-mates (Taylor pitching, Hoy catching) in the opening game of the Ohio State Deaf Softball Tournament in Toledo (Toledo vs. Akron "Rubber City Silents") on Labor Day Weekend, 1942.

On August 7, 1902, in the middle of a dissension-ridden season, the Reds released Hoy. He took his leave cheerfully.

After racking up 1,792 games in the major leagues and a .288 lifetime batting average, Hoy finished out his career with the Los Angeles Loo-loos, in the newly-founded Pacific Coast League, with an impressive 46 stolen bases and 413 put-outs. He played in 211 games- the complete 1903 Schedule. Two of his teammates were Joe Corbett of boxing fame, and Clifford Carlton "Gavy" Cravath, one of notable sluggers of the pre-Ruth era. Hoy's able fielding and hits helped the Loo-loos win the pennant.

Following his exciting PCI season in 1903, Hoy, now 42, brought a 60-acre dairy farm near Mount Healthy on the outskirts of Cincinnati. He operated it for 20 years, and sold it in 1924. During World War I, he was a personnel director of several hundred deaf worker at Goodyears. He coached the Goodyear Silents baseball club from 1919 to 1920, where the Akron "Deaf colony" was at its absolute peak and boasted outstanding sports clubs. He also umpired Deaf-team games. After the Armistice, he and his family returned to Cincinnati.

In 1951, Hoy was unanimously voted the first player to be enshrined in the American Athletic Association of the Deaf's Hall of Fame. The AAAD (now the USA Deaf Sport Federation) began to lobbying to get Hoy inducted into the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York, while he was alive.

Despite having influential friends in the top echelons of organized baseball, Hoy never promoted his own cause. Instead, he lobbied on behalf of the late August "Garry" Herrman, the genial, popular owner of the Reds, and a member of the triumvirate of commissioners who ruled baseball before the one-man commissioner system was instituted (To date, Herrmann has not elected to the National Baseball Hall of Fame, although his name has been included on recent ballots.)

Even after retiring from professional play, Hoy retained his enthusiasm for baseball. He joined a local amateur team, coached Deaf-community teams, attended meetings of the Baseball Players of Yesterday, and kept in contact with old friends and researchers. A 1939 reunion with Clark Griffith and Connie Mack made headlines, and a press photographer snapped the trio enjoying a nostalgic chat in sign language.

On October 7, 1961, Hoy tossed the first ball at Opening Day of the third World Series game in Crosley Field (Reds vs. Yankees), shortly afterwards, he became ill and was hospitalized. On December 15, 1961, he died of a stroke. He was 99 years, 5 months and 8 days old-- just over 6 months shy of his hundredth birthday. He had hopped to reach 100 and almost did.

Dear Student Athletes, Coaches and Families,

Welcome to the 2016 Hoy Baseball and Softball Tournament. We are thrilled to have you back in Ranger territory for another wonderful competition among our great schools for the Deaf. I wish our fields allowed us to host you all on campus, but I believe you will enjoy the Southeast Metro Park fields. We will still do everything we can to provide you with great Texas hospitality.

This tournament gives us an opportunity to renew old friendships and make new ones. There is nothing more exciting than watching and competing against your peers in this kind of athletic event. We look forward to some great games. Whatever the final results of this week, you have all worked hard and trained hard to get here, and each of you are winners!

I would like to congratulate all the coaches and their families as well. We know you make many sacrifices to support your athletes. We want to thank our sponsors, coaches and TSD staff for supporting this tournament. You made a difference in the lives of our students!

Sincerely,

Welcome to the Home of the Rangers!

We are thrilled to have the opportunity to host Hoy XVI tournament, the one and only National Deaf Prep baseball/softball tournament of this caliber.

Our committee is very excited about this year's event and hope to make this a memorable experience for coaches, players and fans from each of the six participating schools vying for the Hoy XVI championship. Please join me to wish everyone good luck during the tournament.

While you are here, make the most of the opportunities afforded you. It is our hope that you will interact with old friends, make new friends and above all, promote sportsmanship.

My Texas sized thanks to Hoy XVI core committee and their committee for their dedication and hard work planning such a special event.

Good luck!

LETTER FROM LEN GONZALES, NDIAA CHAIRPERSON

To the participants and fans of the Hoy Tournament XVI!

On the behalf of the NDIAA, it is a pleasure to extend my greetings to all those will participate in the Hoy Tournament at Austin, Texas! Enjoy and savor the competitive and friendship during the weekend. This is one of the examples why NDIAA strongly believes in a competitive environment where fair play and character development are essential. I anticipate that when you depart from the tournament and activities you will be exhausted, but you will know why the Hoy Tournament is a big part of your Deaf School community and your life!

For dedicated employees and volunteers at Texas School for the Deaf, I thank all of you for all that you have done and are doing for the Hoy Tournament. You have helped student-athletes develop their potential and gain the confidence they need to capture their dreams. This is the result of your hard work and dedication.

Please accept my best wishes for a wonderful event and many more years of success.

Len Gonzales

DISCOVER YOUR FUTURE

Do you know what you'd like to be doing 10, 20 or 30 years from now? Discover Your Future this summer at Gallaudet!

- Tons of team-building activities develop leadership and teamwork.
- Self-assessment activities reveal more about your strengths and weaknesses, potential careers, values, and interests.
- Develop a mini-portfolio that you can use with your parents, school counselors, and potential employers.
- Attend class during the day, participate in fun evening activities, and sightsee in Washington, D.C.!

For deaf and hard of hearing students entering grades 10 through 12.

IMMERSE INTO ASL

Already know a little and want to learn more? Immerse into ASL at Gallaudet and watch the words flow!

- Three different course options match your current skill level, from intermediate to advanced.
- Learn alongside fellow signers from all over the country.
- Get tons of neat information about Deaf culture and deaf history.
- Attend class during the day and practice nonstop while you sightsee in Washington, D.C., attend social events, and more!

For deaf, hard of hearing, and hearing students entering grades 10 through 12.

YOUNG SCHOLARS PROGRAM:

EXPLORING THE SCIENCES

Got science on the brain? Do you like chemistry? Marine biology? Want to learn more about neuroscience? Then join four deaf and hard of hearing Gallaudet science professors this summer for our Young Scholars Program: Exploring the Sciences.

- Perform hands-on chemistry experiments.
- Explore the Anacostia River, "The Forgotten River", and research the health of its ecosystem.
- Perform experiments on the food you eat everyday.
- Learn more about your brain using neuroscience equipment.

Note: Young Scholars Program: Exploring the Sciences is limited to 10 participants.

For deaf and hard of hearing students entering grades 9 through 12.

YOUNG SCHOLARS PROGRAM:

r/EVOLUTIONARY STAGES!

Are you a natural-born thespian? Do you enjoy being on stage as a performer?
